Jordan is committed to overpaying for electricity from a Chinese-financed power plant despite the cheap Israeli alternative. The State of Israel has been preoccupied in recent months by the urgent need to construct new power plants to boost electricity production capacity. But what happens when a.

After four years, the Chinese mega-mart in Jordan - Dragon Mall - has closed its doors. The 160 orientally-decorated stores and office spaces could not attract the business once hoped for the $20-million-worth project - built to serve as a reflection of China's investments in Jordan. Over the last.
